

This book is written by a man who has recently been diagnosed with diabetes, and his wife. None of us had studied nutrition or medicine. The key to picking recipes was to use ingredients low in carbohydrates, cholesterol and sodium, and to keep frying to a minimum. Many of the recipes we had initially chosen have been modified either by replacing ingredients rich in carbs with those low on carbs, or by changing quantities so that diabetic-friendly ingredients weigh more. These recipes are just a starting point. You can create your own by consulting the nutritional value tables put together by experts in nutrition, and by using your favorite ingredients - as long as their carbohydrate levels are low. Food restrictions can be a burden, but in time you will manage to make your own, personalized recipes. Don't forget: each time you decide on a new recipe, measure the quantities and establish their nutritional values per serving. Last but not least, set a daily menu that should not exceed the maximum levels of carbohydrates, cholesterol and sodium your doctor recommended. Writing a recipe book for people with diabetes was not a whim of mine - it was a necessity, as I couldn't find any such book on the Romanian market. Two or three had indeed been published, but they were out of print and I could no longer find them. I first looked up the level of carbohydrates for each ingredient. A link to the resulting table can be found at the end of this book. Then, my wife Luiza started cooking meals for me by calculating things so I wouldn't exceed the 6.3 oz of carbohydrates I was allowed daily. This book is the culinary story of several weeks in my life. All of these recipes have been tried and tested in our home, and I recommend them unconditionally. Join me for a delicious bite between us, diabetics!
